Thought for the Month

Take a moment to say these familiar words: "They shall grow not old, as we that are left grow old:
Age shall not weary them, nor the years condemn. At the going down of the sun and in the morning
We will remember them."

On a March evening in 1944 my great, great aunt took her oil paints, a 20" x 16" canvas and a few brushes up to Wimbledon Common where she painted a view of wind bent trees. In her diary she wrote how she captured the "calm peacefulness that old Common takes on late in the day".

During WWI her fiancé was killed and she never married. Despite the bombings in London during WWII she was able to appreciate and find comfort in the beauty of nature.

The painting now proudly hangs in my lounge.

In Romans Chapter12 v.12: 'Do not let evil defeat you; instead conquer evil with good'.
